We all believe that student and teacher motivation is important in successful language learning and teaching. However, when students are not motivated, what can we do about it? In this interactive workshop, we will discuss "Growth Mindset" and the impact it is having on student and teacher attitudes to learning.

You will come away with answers to the following questions. What is "Growth Mindset"? Why should I know about it? Is it actually relevant to teaching and learning English? And how can having a "Growth Mindset" help learners and teachers work towards better results? Simple, practical "Growth Mindset" techniques for the Young Learners classroom will be provided.

ADMISSION IS FREE

Martina Kaňová works for Oxford University Press as an Educational Representative. She studied Czech and Art at the Faculty of Education at Masaryk University in Brno to become a primary and secondary teacher. Later she also graduated in English language teaching.

She fell in love with English and has been involved with this beautiful language since then. Before she started working for OUP, she had taught English as a freelance teacher. Martina was responsible for courses of all levels, including individual/company courses.
